1. On 28 November 1951 a decree concerning the surveillance of strategic roads was published by the Hungarian Minister of Communications. Accordingly, roads which are classified as (a) Army Routes or (b) International Routes will be guarded by mixed detachments, consisting of partisans, military personnel, and members of the Communist party. Henceforth, any deliberate damage to these roads will be construed as an offense against the State and will be punishable by death.
2. This regulation is a result of the accelerated rate of sabotage suffered by strategically vital roads during the course of six months preceding the publication of the decree.
